

BEST DOG-FRIENDLY VACATIONS IN THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST

One of the reasons I started my blog was to research what all there is to do in the Pacific Northwest. I've lived in Seattle for over 20 years, but there are still many places I've never been to. However, one of the struggles I have when traveling is figuring out what to do with my two dogs. My goal is to always find dog-friendly vacations in the Pacific Northwest so they can come with me.

My rescue dogs, a Border Collie mix and a German Shepherd mix, aren't exactly small, so it's not easy to take them everywhere I go. I've been pleasantly surprised to find that many places in the Pacific Northwest are dog-friendly.

DOG-FRIENDLY VACATIONS IN WASHINGTON

There are so many dog-friendly vacations in Washington that it'd be impossible to list them all. Here are just a few of the places I recommend going to if you want to go on a pet-friendly vacation in the state.

BLAINE

The city of Blaine is the last one you'll go through in Washington right before you hit the Canadian border. You don't have to go to Canada to have an adventure, however. Blaine is located right on the water and is perfect for taking long hikes with your pup or even kayaking if they like to do that.

While there are plenty of places to stay, I highly recommend booking a room at Semlahmoo Resort. I stayed here with my two pups and absolutely loved their stay. This dog-friendly hotel makes your pups feel extremely welcome during their stay. As soon as we got in the room, they ran to their food and water bowls which already had dog treats in them.

They also had a few gifts left for them, including adorable Semiahoo bandanas, tennis bowls, and a pop-up water bowl. We had a room right on the water so it was easy to take them outside to the bathroom and to walk around the beach. It costs $25 per dog per night to bring them, which was more than worth it to be able to bring them on vacation and have them enjoy it too.
